WHY LISTINGS EXPIRE.

THE 2026 GUIDE FOR ARKANSAS HOMEOWNERS

What actually kills a listing, the numbers nobody shows you, and the one thing about Zillow that changes everything.

PREPARED BY THE BLK GROUP · #1 TEAM FOR HOMES SOLD IN CENTRAL ARKANSAS · 2025

PART ONE

IT WAS NEVER THE HOUSE.

If your listing expired, someone probably let you believe it was the house. The price. The market. The season. Here is the truth, from a team that has sat through thousands of expired listing consultations: homes rarely fail on their own.

Listings fail because they lose momentum. And momentum dies when there is no strategy.

Most agents launch a listing with good intentions. They put it in the MLS, post a few photos, share it on social media once, and then they wait. For a week or two, that works. Buyers are watching. Showings happen.

Then the market moves on. New listings replace yours at the top of every search. Your statistics flatten. Showings slow. The phone goes quiet. And somewhere around day 60, you realize you haven't heard from your Realtor in weeks.

Over time, your listing becomes stale. Eventually, it expires. Not in one day. One missed opportunity at a time.

THE EIGHT PATTERNS THAT KILL LISTINGS

NO ONGOING ADJUSTMENTS
The listing on day 90 looks exactly like it did on day 1.

NO REVIEW PROCESS
Nobody sits down weekly to ask what the numbers are saying.

WEAK PRICING STRATEGY
A number picked once, then defended instead of tested.

POOR PHOTOGRAPHY
Buyers decide in seconds. Bad photos end the decision early.

WEAK MARKETING
A yard sign and an MLS entry is not a marketing plan.

LITTLE COMMUNICATION
Silence from the agent reads as silence from the market.

NO ANALYSIS
Views, saves, and feedback collected by no one, used for nothing.

NO ACCOUNTABILITY
Nobody grades the work, so the work never improves.

Count how many of the eight your last listing had.
Most expired listings had at least five.

PART TWO

THE NUMBERS NOBODY SHOWS YOU.

Before you choose your next agent, you deserve to know what the industry looks like from the inside. These numbers surprise almost every homeowner we meet.

79%

of Realtors sold zero homes last year.

93%

of Realtors sold fewer than 10 homes.

0.1%

of Realtors sell 100+ homes per year.

Most sellers never ask their agent how many homes they actually sold last year. It is the single most revealing question you can ask, because marketing a home well is a volume skill. You get good at it by doing it constantly, measuring everything, and being forced to fix what does not work.

WHY EXPOSURE DECIDES YOUR PRICE

EXPOSURE CREATES DEMAND

The more qualified buyers who see your home, the stronger the demand, the stronger the offers.

SUPPLY AND DEMAND SETS VALUE

When fewer buyers see your home, demand drops, and the pressure on your price points down.

DEMAND IS LEVERAGE

Multiple interested buyers means you control the negotiation. An invisible listing means you don't.

WHAT BUYERS THINK WHEN A HOME SITS

- ✕ "Why hasn't anyone bought it?"
- ✕ "Something must be wrong with it."
- ✕ "They'll probably take a low offer."
- ✕ "Let's wait and see if it drops again."

None of those thoughts are about your house. All of them cost you money. Which brings us to the part almost nobody tells sellers.

PART THREE

THE 30-DAY WINDOW.

#3

Zillow only displays the previous 30 days of views and saves on your listing.

Read that again, because it changes how you should think about every day your home sits on the market.

A listing on day 100 is not showing buyers 100 days of interest. It is showing them days 70 through 100 only. And by day 70, the views have slowed, the saves have slowed, and the numbers on your listing look thin.

DAY 1 · BUYERS ONLY SEE DAYS 70–100 · DAY 100

Over 80% of buyers start their search on Zillow. So the first impression of your home, for most of the market, is a stat line that quietly says: nobody wants this one.

WHY THIS HURTS MORE THAN PRICE

- ✕ Low recent views make a home look unwanted
- ✕ Buyers assume something is wrong
- ✕ Showings, offers, and urgency all drop
- ✕ Price cuts on a stale listing look desperate instead of strategic

WHAT IT MEANS FOR YOU

Day 30 is not a milestone. It is a deadline. A listing that is going to sit past it needs to be relaunched, not left to age: new photos, new copy, new campaign, a fresh clock, and fresh momentum.

Most agents have never even heard of this window. The good ones build their entire strategy around it.

A home that looks new gets treated like new.
A home that looks tired gets treated like a discount.

PART FOUR

WHAT A REAL PLAN LOOKS LIKE.

Whoever you list with next, including us, hold them to this standard. Before you sign anything, ask for all eight in writing.

- ✓ A written launch plan for the first 7 days
- ✓ A weekly performance report, every week, no chasing
- ✓ Every metric graded, and explained in plain English
- ✓ A review process that triggers real adjustments
- ✓ Professional photography, video, and drone
- ✓ Paid advertising, not just a yard sign and the MLS
- ✓ A relaunch plan for day 30, built in from day one
- ✓ The number of homes they sold last year, stated out loud

If an agent hesitates on any of the eight, you have learned what you needed to know.
